

Statement of participation

Mukesh Shrestha

has completed the free course including any mandatory tests for:

Project management: the start of the project journey

Projects, what they are, how they come about, and responses to problems and planning were introduced in this 35-hour free course.

Issue date: 21 January 2025

www.open.edu/openlearn

This statement does not imply the award of credit points nor the conferment of a University Qualification. This statement confirms that this free course and all mandatory tests were passed by the learner.

Please go to the course on OpenLearn for full details:

<https://www.open.edu/openlearn/money-business/leadership-management/project-management-the-start-the-project-journey/content-section-0>

COURSE CODE: M865_1

Project management: the start of the project journey

<https://www.open.edu/openlearn/money-business/leadership-management/project-management-the-start-the-project-journey/content-section-0>

Course summary

This free course, Project management: The start of the project journey, introduces projects, what they are, how they come about, responses to problems and planning. It explores the role of key players including the project manager, feasibility studies, decision making and project life cycles.

Learning outcomes

By completing this course, the learner should be able to:

- define what a project is
- understand the importance of risk
- define the questions a decision maker needs to ask
- list the main activities and tasks of a project manager
- consider phased development, prototype approaches or agile methods.

Completed study

The learner has completed the following:

Section 1

Conception 'The journey begins'

Section 2

Feasibility

Section 3

Making decisions

Section 4

Projects the life cycle the project manager and success

Section 5

Software development